Nancy Wilson is celebrated as a seminal musician in rock n' roll history. A guitar virtuoso from the age of 9, Nancy (and her sister Ann) led the multi-platinum rock group, Heart, who have sold upwards of 35 million albums. Nancy is revered as an ingenious guitar player, and as a gifted lead vocalist. In fact, that's Nancy singing on Heart's first Number One hit, "These Dreams." As a songwriter, Nancy has co-written a collection of indelible songs that have earned their way into the classic rock canon ("Magic Man," "Crazy on You," "Barracuda," "Straight On"). Nancy and Ann were honored with the ASCAP Founders Award (2009), ASCAP's most prestigious honor, awarded to songwriters who have made pioneering contributions to music. During an era when females in rock 'n' roll were scarce, Nancy helped to carve out a place for women to front rock bands and dominate on stage. Her icon status was cemented when Heart was inducted into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame in 2012. Her new band, Nancy Wilson's Heart, features Nancy on guitar and vocals, guitarist Ryan Waters, bassist Andy Stoller, drummer Ben Smith and keyboardist Dan Walker. Vocal duties will be provided by Kimberly Nichole, who was a finalist on season 8 of The Voice.
