Damn Tall Buildings are a bluegrass band at heart but pull from a wide range of influences including swing, ragtime, and jazz. In 2013, then students at Boston's Berklee College of Music, the band took their instruments to nearby street corners and jammed for hours on old bluegrass and blues songs, traditional fiddle tunes, and eventually their own original music. Since then Damn Tall Buildings have grown to new heights over the course of their decade of creating together. They've made four albums: 2014's Cure-All, 2015's self-titled, 2019's Don't Look Down and 2022's Sleeping Dogs. The band has also relocated to Brooklyn, NY and toured widely, appearing at festivals like Grey Fox Bluegrass Festival, Philadelphia Folk Festival, Freshgrass Festival, Ossipee Valley Festival, Walnut Valley Festival, Blissfest and Merlefest. Now based in Brooklyn, NY, they have begun to travel the globe playing bigger and bigger stages, making lots of friends wherever they go.
